MRCVS – VET PROFILE

Title

Dr Suzie Jaderberg MRCVS

Job

Veterinary Surgeon

MRCVS stands for member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons. It shows that this doctor is a vet who treats animal patients, not humans.

I became a vet because

I loved animals when I was growing up.

We had lots of family pets, and I was always interested in their illnesses when they got sick.

I was also interested in science and biology and enjoyed learning about things like surgeries.

My favourite part of being a vet is seeing all kinds of creatures, big and small, including big, friendly dogs, small rabbits, reptiles, and birds.

Every day is exciting. You never know what's coming around the corner.

To become a great vet, you need to

- be good at animal handling
- stay calm in stressful situations
- be good at science and maths
- be good at problem-solving

My least favourite part of being a vet is when animals are really sick and the owners are very attached to their pets. It is sad to see them suffering.

But one of the most rewarding parts of the job is when we can make them feel better and send them home the same day.

The most unusual animal I have worked with is a leopard gecko with stomach problems. Their skin is almost translucent, so you can see their organs.

My pets are a Cavapoo who looks like a big, fluffy teddy bear and a Schnauzer called Molly.

I also have a blue budgie called Rita.
